activities

Without involvement and mental exertion, school life stagnates and becomes a mechanical routine. Activities animate a student's life and change him from an indistinguished cog in the wheel to a vital, indispensable factor in a force of persons working toward meaningful aims.

Activities: things we do

Special activities

At Salem High now, as everywhere, there is a small band of persons who are the true representatives of the caring generation, brothers to great people of the past and future. They are new only in the sense that they are fresh personalities. Otherwise they are identical to all the compassionate, probing people who ever lived. The aware individuals are not necessarily popular. The majority of their schoolmates don't enjoy being shaken out of their indifference and this is what awareness inevitably does. Thus anyone who insists on reminding others of their blind complacency is rejected and branded as weird. Nevertheless it is the new breed of people who will be shaping tomorrow's world. Although the individuals have common goals and characteristics, they are singly unique. They are creators: they paint, write, sing, believe, rebel. They have open eyes and open minds. As is true of all past and future members of this family, each one is constantly questioning values instead of accepting them as traditions. They are the ones who challenge figures of inflexible authority. Although they are not accepted leaders, they are the ones who dare to be radical so that future leaders can follow trails that have already been broken. The people of this timeless breed are the most aware and most alive in existence. The price of their daring independence is a high one but is willingly paid. The price is loneliness; the things purchased are self-respect, freedom, and the closest thing to total happiness men will experience.

The night air was brisk and filled with expectant excitement. The crowd faithfully cheered the team throughout the first half of the game, but their minds were trained on the event that would be taking place at half-time. The same thoughts were going through the minds of six lovely senior girls, for one of them would be crowned the 1968 SHS Homecoming Queen. Cathy Bricker, Sally McGaffick, Debbie Ping, Elaine Dangel, Sue Stanton, Cindy Brown, and Cindy Vogel waited in silent anticipation as the long white envelope was opened and the name was read. The thunder of the crowd's applause signaled its approval as Miss Debbie Ping advanced to receive the necklace and crown of Homecoming Queen.

Half-time of the game arrived more quickly than usual for the six senior girls nominated for the honor of SHS Basketball Sweetheart. Anticipation shone in the eyes of Jerry Johnson, Cindy Brown, Patty Doyle, Mary Albertson, Mary Beth Hiegel, and Elaine Dangel as they marched to their positions on the arms of their escorts. Confusion ensued when the white envelope bearing the name of the future sweetheart was mislaid. The tension was broken, however, when the principal announced that Miss Elaine Dangel reigned as the 1968-69 Salem High School Basketball Sweetheart. With tears of surprise and happiness, Elaine received the traditional necklace and kiss from the captain of the team.

May 16 will always be remembered as a very special night, for on that evening SHS was transformed into a scene from Gone With the Wind. The theme of the prom, "Southern Grandeur," was accented with a quaint wishing well, a pastel mural depicting antebellum Southern life, and sentimental music provided by the Jack Halkides Orchestra. The highlight of the evening occurred with the crowning of the Quaker royalty, Quaker King, George Spack, and Quaker Queen Elaine Dangel. At the stroke of midnight, SHS prom-goers hurried home to change for the after prom at Wedgewood Lanes. Dancing, bowling, pool, and eating occupied the students until the early morning.

The night air was cool as 297 seniors prepared to line up for the processional into the gymnasium crowded with proud parents, friends, and relatives. Caps and gowns were adjusted as the first notes of "Pomp and Circumstance" signaled the start of Salem High's 105th annual commencement. Elaine Dangel opened the program with the welcome, and two seniors, Debbie Green and John Krauss, presented musical solos. Chosen by the class, senior speakers George Spack and Lorie Roth spoke on the theme "Intelligence." With "Man's Greatest Resource" as his topic, George recapped man's great technological advances. On the future of man he said, "Perhaps now he should try to solve the problems which exist within himself. Maybe he should look into himself, into his heart, and see what is there." Speaking on "Man's Hope or Man's Destruction," Lorie cited past and present uses of man's intelligence to destroy. Lorie pointed out that man is continuing to misuse technology and must work toward correcting the problem or be destroyed by it. She concluded by addressing the senior class: "Tonight we are on the verge of facing the world—a world filled with tremendous achievements as well as tremendous problems. Therefore we the class of 1969 must couple our intelligence with reason, insight, and understanding in order to create a more peaceful, orderly, and just society." Following the speakers, Principal H. Joseph Marra presented the class, and Mark Equizi read the role as Bryce Kendall, school board president, awarded the diplomas. Tassels were changed, and commencement ended amid congratulations and handshakes for the future.

Sports

Football opened up the sports scene at Salem High this year by compiling a 5-5 card. Coach Bob James' crew opened the season with a victory over Cleveland Lincoln 15-12. Mike Love, senior halfback for the Quakers, was the real workhorse as he scored both touchdowns, one a spectacular catch as he fell into the end zone with 1:12 to go in the game. Salem traveled to Ravenna the following week and saw a drive fall short in the final minutes in a 14-6 defeat. In the most impressive victory of the season, the team finished the campaign with a 54-26 downing of Wellsville. Pinpoint passes from Scot Cody to his teammates put the game out of reach early in the first quarter. Three of the Red and Black men made the Columbiana County All Star Team. On the defensive unit, Most Valuable Player Robbie Richards and end Tom Fisher were given first team recognition, while senior tackle Val Altomare was a first team selection on offense. Love, a three-year veteran, was the leading rusher during the campaign as he ran 109 times for 533 yards. Cody also finished up a fine three-year career as he hit on 87 of 170 passes for 1,089 yards. Dan Russell, only a sophomore, was the leading scorer as he scored six touchdowns for 36 points. Salem outscored its opponents 162 to 140 and more than doubled the passing yardage 1,161 to 554.

Also competing in the fall term, the Quaker Cross Country team saw one streak ended but made impressive gains both individually and teamwise. At a dual meet at East Liverpool, showing a 12-0 record for two years and a 5-0 record for the year, Salem was defeated by a score of 27-28. During the remainder of the season the spikers, coached by Mike Guappone, went on to post a 6-3 record. The sod runners came back later in the season to set back every opponent which had previously sent the unheralded runners down to defeat, This year's team became the first in the history of the school to qualify its whole team for regional competition. They did this by placing third out of a field of 24 teams in the district meet at Boardman. Senior Roger Barnes established a new record at the Salem Golf Club as he covered the distance in 10:03.

As shoulder pads were thrown off and spikes put away, sports fans turned their thoughts toward basketball, anticipating an exciting and thrill-packed season. The Quakers gave everyone what they wanted as they put claim to a fine 15-5 record. The roundballers opened the campaign with an 83-63 loss to a very fine Dayton Roth team. The Cabasmen knocked off their next seven opponents, a series highlighted by a thrilling one-point victory over Canton Timken in which Scott Cody sank a pressure-packed lay-up in the closing seconds to give the team a 56-55 decision. A highly favored Boardman team entered Salem town next and had to go into overtime before they were able to win it 68-62. In probably the most exciting game of the season, the Red and Black finished up the regular schedule with a 53-52 victory over Steubenville. Captain George Spack sank two free throws after time had expired to give Salem the win.

Salem's hopes to enter district and regional competition were shattered when an upset-minded East Palestine team sent them down to defeat. Numerous records and milestones were reached during the year. Coach John Cabas attained another of his coaching goals as he captured his 400th victory in a career covering 26 years, 19 spent with Salem. George Spack set a new field goal mark when he connected for 11 straight shots in an 84-48 win over Campbell. He also established a new free throw record by sinking 67 of 82 for an 82.9 percentage from the line. Larry Hrvatin, a junior roundballer, broke the rebound record for one game when he cleared off 39 against Ravenna.

Spack was the leading scorer with 385 points and a 19-point average. Hrvatin was the leading rebounder with 203. In the Big 8 Loop the Cabasmen tied Warren Western Reserve for second place in the standings, posting a 5-2 record.

Wrestling under Coach Don Bennett continued to progress as the matmen finished up the season with a 3-9 record with only three seniors on the varsity squad. In tournament action senior captain Bill Knepper took first in the 133-pound class and Jeff Zimmerman also captured first in his 103-pound division. Matt Schaefer, 165 pounds, and Bob Brown, 175 pounds, finished fifth in their divisions of the sectional tournament. Knepper, who was voted most valuable player of the squad, finished the season with a 15-4 record, the best mark ever for a Salem High wrestler.

Spring saw the Salem track team preparing for the many dual meets they would encounter and one main goal of winning the county meet. The spikers, who posted a 5-2 record under Coach Bing Newton, opened the season with a romp over Wellsville and Lisbon, winning by 90-35-33. Captain Dave Shasteen paced the Quakers as he captured the mile, 880, and pole vault. Salem lost its next two meets to Alliance, winner of the district meet, and Niles. They were undefeated through the rest of their dual meets, scoring decisive victories in each. When the county meet rolled around, East Palestine was rated a 20-point favorite. With a turnout of 800 cheering fans plus an unbelievable effort by the squad, the Salem team came within two points of winning the meet, losing 57-55. Dan Russell won the shot put for the second consecutive year as he got off a toss of 50'7" and Rick Rickman won a thrilling mile-run at the tape in the time of 4:39. The mile relay team, composed of Jerry Filler, Ed Hartman, Dave Floyd, and Jack Shoff, set a new county record in their victory as they covered the distance in 3:34. Dave Shasteen came through with a runaway victory in the 880 as he covered the distance in 2:07. The Red and Black saw only one record fall this year as captains Dick Loutzenhiser and Roger Barnes both broke the two-mile standard of 10:32.2. Barnes set the new record as he posted the best time with a 10:07.

The golf team failed to better last year's record as they were able to post only two victories in 12 outings. Coach Sam Pridon's boys shot good golf during the year but seemed not to get the breaks they needed as they lost most of their matches by just one or two points. The top golfers for the team were senior Jay Youtz, and juniors Mike Mehno, Jack Detwiler, and Dale Cody.

Baseball finished up its third year as a varsity sport by positing a 4-6 record. Coach Chet Tetlow's aggregation opened the campaign by beating a tough Alliance team 7-2. In tournament competition the hardballers were defeated by a hard-hitting Niles ball club, 4-2. Jim Ciotti, a senior veteran, was voted the club's most valuable player, posting a 6-2 record in the pitching department. Scott Cody was the leading hitter as he batted well over .400 in his first year on the club.

Students exploring

Searching beyond the limits of the classroom is an important factor in education, and many SHS groups make a meaningful exploration of the world. By seeking out ideas, the organizations expand their learning in a wide variety of areas. This growth gives added dimension to students' knowledge.

The 35 members of MU ALPHA THETA have discovered the wonders of pure and applied math. Juniors and seniors of high academic standing, the members enjoyed the companionship of like-minded classmates as they deepened their knowledge and interest in the field of mathematics. Adviser Mr. Carl Bevington helped to plan trips such as their visit to Chicago. The club again sponsored the well-received Math Fair.

FORMALDEAIDES is a club for juniors and seniors who have a keen interest in biology. For the past 25 years the club has worked to promote students' understanding in the natural sciences. Members give special reports on different phases of the subject. This year the group traveled to Phipp's Conservatory, the Carnegie Museum, and the aviary in Pittsburgh.

Helping students develop ability in forensic activities and an interest in dramatics is a main goal of the SPEECH CLUB. Members participated in speech contests and captured several trophies. The group also attended area plays, gaining knowledge from the experience of professionals. Ten members of the group were initiated into the National Forensic League.

Under the supervision of Mr. Anthony Monteleone, SPANISH CLUB (Los Conquistadores) participated in a field trip to Cleveland to see the ballet "Folklorico." Projects held by the Spanish Club broadened the students' understanding of the Hispanic world.

The GERMAN CLUB, advised by Mrs. Ruth Zeller, proved to be more active than in the past. About 80 students actively worked to further their understanding of the German heritage. At Christmas time the club decorated a tree in the old German tradition, and in the spring members enjoyed a Bratwurst Festival.

FRENCH CLUB (Le Cercle Francais) invites all students studying French to achieve a better understanding of French people and customs. The amateur Frenchmen enjoyed first-hand accounts from travelers who have journeyed to France. Selling Christmas decorations helped to furnish a Yuletide basket for a needy family. Members enjoyed a French dinner in May.

members, is open to all who are interested in fully understanding the true beauty and meaning of art. For the past ten years, the club members have shown their talent in a May Show held annually downtown. They also entered paintings in the Akron Art Show and Contest and painted the murals for the prom.

FUTURE TEACHERS is open to all sophomore, junior, and senior girls who have an interest in teaching and a desire to gain insight into human behavior. Having completed its second year, Future Teachers has already proved itself a valuable organization. In addition to "subbing" for elementary school teachers, the members assisted high school students needing extra help to "pull through." The club provided an opportunity for girls to increase their understanding of individual problems and achieve a personal fulfillment.

The 90 members of FUTURE SCIENTISTS OF AMERICA once again made the annual Science Fair a rousing success. The members, junior high and senior high school students, participated in countless field trips and worked for such community projects as the heart fund, cystic fibrosis, and muscular dystrophy drives. After a year of such hard labor, the group enjoyed a year-end trip to Michigan.

At the close of its second year, CHESS CLUB continued its promotion of interest in the battle of the minds. The club competed in several tournaments and earned a 2-3 record. The club held bi-annual parties at which, surprisingly enough, no chess playing was allowed.

In their first year the FUTURE SECRETARIES conducted a variety of fund-raising drives to finance their well-earned field trips. Members of the BOE courses formed the club to better their understanding of situations which will confront them in the secretarial world after graduation. One of their jaunts included a tour of a Federal Reserve Bank.

The voices of the ROBED CHOIR rang strong, clear, and beautiful for the pleasure of many audiences this past year. The choir showed its outstanding vocal ability in many different ways. Members performed in the Christmas Vespers and the annual Spring Concert. A concert was given for local Kiwanians, and Salem participated with Columbiana and Minerva in the All-County Music Festival. Soloists and ensembles also took part in district and state contests. The choir enjoyed a fun-filled trip to Washington, D. C. the latter part of April.

Members of the SOPHOMORE GIRLS' GLEE CLUB worked to more fully develop their talents. The girls were exposed to all types of music to prepare them for eventual service in the Robed Choir. They proved their growing talent in the Christmas Vespers and Spring Concert.

Freshmen with the desire to sing had the chance to show their capabilities in the FRESHMAN GIRLS' GLEE CLUB. Students were encouraged to develop their voices for future solo and ensemble work. Members participated in the usual Christmas and spring shows, and more than half the choir entered the spring solo and ensemble contest at Minerva.

The BAND, which has been a part of Salem High School since 1928, is now 108 members strong. Members performed halftime shows at the football games as well as presenting two concerts and competing in a band festival. Senior Bill Eckfeld was this year's recipient of the Bandsman of the Year award and received the additional compliment of having the band perform an original composition of his.

Students serving

As an integral part of school life, SHS's clubs serve their school and community well. Numerous organizations further the Quaker tradition by carrying out projects that benefit those other than themselves. Actively working in a variety of areas, these clubs promote spirit and student interest in school affairs.

STUDENT COUNCIL is the voice of more than 1300 students. Elected by their classmates, the 36 members learn the virtues of citizenship and leadership as they undertake projects to improve Salem High. With the guidance of Mrs. Jane Eckstein, they devised a student dress code, organized a mock election, and adopted an underprivileged foreign child.

The student chapter of AMERICAN FIELD SERVICE, which had 25 members, has been a part of Salem High School for ten years. Formed to promote and help finance the student exchange program, the club aids better understanding between peoples of different nations. This year members raised more than $350 to help finance next year's exchange student.

INTERACT CLUB is an organization "dedicated to service and international understanding." Under the direction of Mr. Carl Bevington, Rotary-connected Interact undertook several projects designed to aid local and international causes. The club's major project was raising funds for war-torn Biafra. Active at SHS for three years, Interact is composed of sophomore, junior, and senior boys.

Completing its ninth year, KEY CLUB has achieved recognition as one of the school's most valuable organizations. Members accomplished much this year, including rebuilding Quaker Sam, collecting clothing for the underprivileged, and sponsoring the Scholarship Banquet. Highlight of the year was the Key Club State Convention, where the local chapter was rated fifteenth out of 100 Key Clubs in Ohio.

A former English teacher, Miss Helen Thorp, who retired last year, dreamed that someday at SHS there would be a club to help students develop their literary and creative gifts. Her dream came true this year when the LITERARY CLUB was formed. All year the group compiled creative work: poems, essays, photographs, even musical compositions. Next fall the material will be assembled into the club's first publication.

The senior high school library serves more than 1300 students as well as the faculty and staff. LIBRARY CLUB assistance is a must for a library with more than 11,000 books and a daily attendance of 500 students. Student librarians perform innumerable duties, including the charging and shelving of books and magazines, preparation of new books for use, and upkeep of the hall showcase. This year the Library Club aided in the preparation of 1500 new books for circulation as well as moving and reshelving all of the books to make space for added shelving units.

The BROADCASTING CLUB, founded by Speech class members, is in its second active year. To develop radio techniques, the club delivered the morning announcements and innovated a news, weather, sports and music program.

The AUDIO-VISUAL CREW, active at SHS for ten years, busied itself with service and distribution of audio-visual equipment. The crew of three was advised by Mr. Herbert Jones.

Communications throughout the school via loudspeaker were made possible by the PUBLIC ADDRESS CREW. The eight-man team supervised the use of all microphones and other public speaking utilities. They also aided in the production of the colorful morning programs of news and announcements.

Any girl who maintained a 3.0 or better academic average was eligible to join HI-TRI at the beginning of her junior year. Beyond giving recognition to girls of high scholastic caliber, the club fulfilled its purpose of being of service to those in need by making scrapbooks and Halloween treats for children in Salem hospitals. Cookies were sent to servicemen in Vietnam as an additional project.

When 200 PEP CLUB members

infiltrate basketball and football crowds, the result is unbelievable spirit. Dedicated to student morale and sportsmanship, the group brightened school halls with clever posters and pin-on pep signs. A member of Pep Club is eligible to become one of 20 PEPETTES who, donning monogrammed sweaters, spelled extra charm and enthusiasm for the Salem High cheering section.

The 18 peppy varsity, reserve, and freshman CHEERLEADERS put in long hours of practice throughout the year, which paid off as they cheered the Quakers on to winning football and basketball seasons. At a bonfire pep assembly, on the football field, on the basketball court — wherever school spirit was found — the cheerleaders were there to encourage it.

Known as the PEP BAND, seven boys and one girl provided music for pep assemblies and basketball and football games. Adding beat and lively melody to satirical chants and peppy cheers, these musicians added an extra note of spirit to the Quaker sports year.

VARSITY S members are young men dedicated to the highest ideals of sportsmanship and athletics. They have contributed their physical prowess and competitive spirits for the glory of Salem High. Each year the Varsity S members sponsor the outstanding Quaker award.

The various PROM COMMITTEES under the direction of the junior class president put many months of work into their "Southern Grandeur" prom on May 16. Highlights of the spring social event included a gazebo, a balcony, and Southern gardens with weeping willow trees.

MONITORS and AIDES performed countless odds and ends which helped maintain perfect lubrication for a smoothly running administration. Monitors were kept busy by serving as combination guides — policemen — errand boys. In addition to signing students in and out, they collected attendance reports, assisted newcomers, and reported unruly students. Serving as "student secretaries," aides typed, filed, and relayed phone messages. They made themselves useful to students and teachers alike.

Working to meet their Tuesday deadlines, the staff of the QUAKER BI-WEEKLY wrote and assigned news and feature articles. Page one was devoted to major news articles, while editorials, letters, and opinion columns appeared on page two. Page three carried news and feature articles, and the sports editors filled page four with lively sports news and their column, "From the Bench." New features of the 1969 bi-weekly included the two columns, "Teen-age Dialogue" and "Out 'n About." The traditional "Salem Quaker" masthead was replaced by a livelier, more modern one: "The Quaker — Student Biweekly Newspaper." These innovations, plus a new headline style, greatly contributed to the graphic upgrading of the paper, helping it to earn once again a National Scholastic Press Association All-American rating.

Each year the QUAKER YEARBOOK staff produces a documentary journal depicting the events of the past school year. Many hours of endless work went into the making of the 1969 volume, the biggest and perhaps most pioneering effort in Quaker history.

personalities

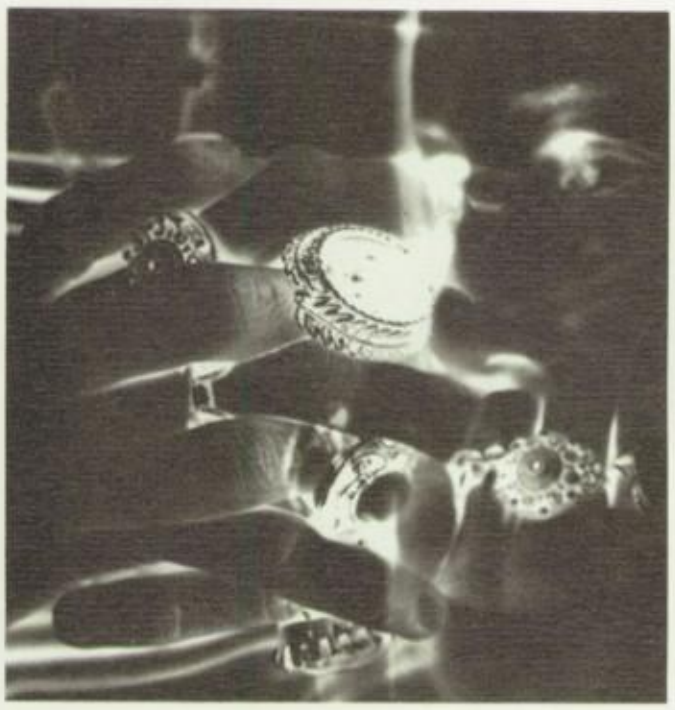
People are always around us, influencing us either intentionally or by chance, people with whom we are always in contact, people whose entire beings are incessantly and often unwillingly consumed by their dedication to education.

Personalities: people we know



Underclassmen

"Hey! How'd you do on that history test? Man, that was a wipe-out!"

"Yeah, and what really ticked me off was how she made that long speech about never purposely misleading her students on an exam. I just barely missed flunking out on that."

"I almost saw the flag on that too. That algebra assignment didn't help matters an awful lot either. Did you ever notice how all the teachers pile on the work toward the end of the year—trying to make up for lost time, I guess."

"It's getting so I have a test every day in something or other."

"I know. I can't hack it either. I don't even study anymore."

"Nobody does. And what do the teachers care? They want out of here just as badly as we do."

"It's been so nice out, and we can't even have class outside. It's like being in a cell all day."

"Well, it hasn't been that bad all year."

"On the other hand, it's been getting pretty wild around here. Remember the flood, and those demonstrations . . . really burned me up the way they took matters into their own hands. I don't care how long somebody's hair is as long as he keeps it clean."

"Yeah, but you have to admit they had a point. I mean if one guy's got to cut his hair they all do. It's the same for the girls and those short skirts, which I'm not knocking. It's just that the rules have to be for everyone. That's what the dress code is all about, isn't it?"

"I suppose. But I'm sure it matters how a kid looks! As far as I'm concerned I can get more work done when I'm comfortable than when I'm all dressed up."

"Keep it down! The librarian will have a fit if she has to yell at us again."

"Hey, how did you like that great discussion we had in the current events this morning? That guy who was cutting down Bucher was really getting on my nerves."

"Yeah, but you really put him straight."

"Well, he bothers me. Ever since he tried to defend Sirhan and Ray I kind of wait for a chance to knock him down. Anyone with a mind that closed deserves to have his little ego smashed every so often."

"What kills me is he's no worse than lots of other kids. There's this girl in my Spanish class that truly thinks the Communists are on the brink of taking over. Remember that speaker we had last month? She actually believed all that bull he was feeding us."

"Well, a lot of what he said made sense to me. I mean, you can't go around burning down a lot of buildings and stirring up trouble if you haven't got something constructive to replace the establishment with."

"I guess so. It's just that some people refuse to admit there are big problems in this country. In this school, too."

"It's better than some schools we could be going to. A friend of mine moved to Youngstown and last time I saw him he said he was lucky he'd survived that long. You know, you hear about knifings in school and stuff, but you don't really believe it happens. Well, this kid saw one of his teachers cut up in the cafeteria. This bunch of greasers got together and decided they didn't like the food that day, so they took it out on the guy that was on lunch duty."

"Say, that reminds, me. What's for lunch?"

"It's stuffed peppers or Johnny Marzetti. Take your choice."

"You brought your lunch, didn't you? Pretty crafty."

"Well, I have an extra sandwich I'll let you have—for a price."

"Anything. That reminds me. How much is the after-prom going to cost me this year?"

"I don't know. Two-fifty or three, I think. I hope my date likes the Burger Chef an awful lot. Did you rent your tux yet?"

"No, I'm not sure where to get it yet. Are you going to help decorate?"

"Are you kiddin' me? I'm not that big on this school spirit thing. I was on practically all of the committees as it is."

"Have you decided what you'll sign up for next year?"

"No, but the counselors were in

my English class giving us the pitch. This one kid I know is in that vocational program. Sometimes I wish I had gotten into it. I don't know what I'll do. My parents are nagging about college, and those college boards! How'd you do on your SAT?"

"I don't know, and I'm sick of worrying about it. I think I'll run away and do what I want to for a change, and not have to worry about competing for grades and money."

"That's just about how I feel right now. Think of those seniors getting out in ten days!"

"I know, I know. Then I think about how much longer I have to go and I get sick all over again."

"I get what you mean. The pressure is eating me from the inside. I just want to get it all over and sleep all summer."

"That'd be great, except I have to work this summer. I still don't see how I'm going to be able to get up at six o'clock. You workin'?"

" 'Fraid so. My dad's been griping about money for college and adult responsibilities, so I had to get a job. It wasn't easy either. Lottsa kids didn't get one."

"The poor slobs will probably have to sleep all summer. Maybe I can give one of them my - -"

"Hey, we're getting the hairy eyeball again. We'd better shut up."

"Yeah, well, she can - -"

"Why, what do you mean, 'Be quiet, or we'll get our cards pulled?' We didn't say a word . . . yeah, but . . . I was just explaining this math to him and . . . I know we're not supposed to do homework in the library, but what are we supposed . . . 'read a book?' I can't read, so . . . yeah, well, there aren't any books in here with really good pictures. Now if you had a subscription to . . . I wasn't trying to be smart . . . pulled? We just got our cards back two days ago! All right, all right, we're going."

Achievements

Underclass officers were busy this year with a number of inevitable fund-raising projects. Freshman officers started their class treasury by running the concession stand at both football and basketball games. Pencil sales and window washes directed by the sophomore officers bolstered their account. They also selected three rings that were voted on by the class. Junior class officers found the prom on their minds even in

Although the senior class had no fund-raising projects, the officers had a busy year. They investigated possibilities for a class gift, and although the officers and class wanted to give a student lounge, the idea was dropped because of a lack of space. The officers searched further for a suitable gift, and a portable PA system was the final choice. Sorting and distributing announcements was another task the senior officers completed. However, their most important roles came during commencement. Elaine Dangel opened the program with a welcome, and Mark Equizi read the role while Cathy Bricker assisted with the awarding of diplomas. Dana Barnes, class president, led the graduating seniors in the traditional changing of the tassels.

A Rotary student, Karin Lenhammar found many things in America similar to her native Sweden. One of the things Karin especially liked about the school was the grading system which she thought was fairer than the one back home. As a member of Art Guild, she participated in their projects and displayed art work at the annual May Show.

AFS student Evelyn Chung adjusted to Salem High's ways and manners very quickly despite the differences from her home country, Malaysia. While here she was able to see much of America, journeying to Washington, D. C.

with the choir and Chicago with the math club. In the annual math fair, Evelyn won a trophy for her math project. She was a little surprised at the school's graduation procedure; in Malaysia graduation is a simple affair without caps and gowns.

Jorge Escala was Salem's second Rotary exchange student from Argentina. As a member of the football team, he introduced the soccer style kick for place kicking. Jorge was a member of Interact and helped the Spanish students as a member of Spanish Club. He returned home during Christmas time.

Four Boys' State delegates and two alternates represented Salem this summer in Athens, Ohio. They were chosen to attend the session after a series of interviews by American Legion officials. Two Girls' State delegates and their alternates were selected from a number of girls nominated by the faculty. Both groups spent a week in intensive study of the United States system of election and government. Boys' State delegates were Randy Colaizzi, Dean Hansell, Bob Herron, and Bob Roberts. The alternates were Rick Hannon and Randy Hanzlick. Attending Girls' State were Pam Bruderly and Mary Beth Beall. Girls' alternates were Sandy Jackson and Sue Taugher.

Tension mounted, the crowd stilled, and a name was announced to the multitude. The occasion was the annual recognition assembly, and the student body provided the stars. Fifteen awards, amounting to more than $800, were giving to outstanding students. Cindy Fisher and Bill Eckfeld copped the Danforth Award for the two seniors deemed best "all around student." Honorable mention for National Merit placement went to Dan Walker, Scott Clark, and Lorie Roth. Students found their special talents recognized with equally special awards. Speech Club oration trophies were given to Mercy Smith, Margie Eckstein, Nancy Cleckner, and Rosemary Stephanic, and the Salco stenography award was won by Linda Belich, Lynn Scott, Becky Bricker, and Beth Steele. Individual honors, the Betty Crocker, Bausch and Lomb, and Martha McCready math awards, were won by Holly Smith, Scott Clark, and Dan Brown, respectively. A trades and industry award went to Mark Sabatino. Elaine Dangel and Debbie Green won the Arion award for musicianship. Twelve students from all four classes won money in the Brooks creative writing award: seniors Lorie Roth, Scott Clark, and Cindy Fisher; juniors Mary Lee Purrington, Randy Colaizzi, and Pam Bruderly; sophomores Jan Deane, Cyndy Klein-

man and Jan Elevick; and freshmen Bruce Zellers, Debbie Ray, and Kathy Shasteen. This year's Marie Burns music awards were claimed by Debbie Green, John Krauss, Ron Krauss, Nancy Cleckner, Mercy Smith, Sue Schehl, Ron Roberts, and Beth McLaughlin. Scholastic Art awards were presented to Debbie Zellers, Janet Hutcheson, Marianne Galchick, Kathy Cowie, Elaine Melitshka, and Gail Kovach.

Awarded gold cords symbolizing scholastic achievement, ten gifted seniors were recognized for their outstanding grade point averages. The competition was extremely close with only .008 of a point separating the top two students. The standings for the top ten: Scott Clark (3.94), Cindy Fisher (3.93), Peg Stone (3.92), Lorie Roth (3.81), Buff Fisher (3.80), Cathy Krumlauf (3.79), Mary Ann Helman (3.75), Debbie Ping (3.75), Wally Ward (3.73), and Janet Galchick (3.69). Besides being honored at the recognition assembly, the top ten were feted at a luncheon by the Kiwanis and presented with dictionaries.

Seniors

Well, here I am, waiting once again to see if these guidance counselors have anything to say worth listening to. I'm not sure anyone can help me at this point. What a dismal thing to think! Still, like my parents have been saying, what I do after June rests on my own decision.

I get scared just thinking about surviving alone at college. It seems as though no matter what kinds of college preparatory classes I've taken and student handbooks I get, I'll be lost. Worse yet, I imagine all the other freshmen will be right at home within a week. I know it won't be that bad, but I can't help worrying about it. Well, one consolation is that I have a few months left as a senior. I can't really say what's so great about senior year. It's partly the powerful feeling of watching freshmen flee in terror at my approach, the wickedness of skipping out when I feel like it, and the security of still being in a situation where most responsibilities can be given to someone else. At the same time, senior year can be pretty much of a drag. People put such pressure on me for grades and then turn around and offer totally boring courses that are supposed to prepare me for my "college experience." It's an endless cycle: the pressure creates tension among students and then when they try to take their minds off the responsibilities they're accused of being reckless and indifferent, which in turn creates more tension. By next year, I'll at least be away from my parents' pressure and nagging. For once I'll be able to look at issues without my parents trying to influence my opinions. That's probably the best thing about being away from home. I'll have a chance to solidify my own beliefs. I mean, I love my family and all that, but I have my own habits and ideas that they won't accept

and I won't change.

College life is so much freer, and the atmosphere is so open I won't be pressured about my ideas. Dad's always lecturing about not becoming a hippie or a radical, but you don't have to be fanatic to be open on controversial issues. I can't shut out good ideas just because popular opinion gives the group a bad name. I only hope I don't get so carried away with openness that I just have wishy washy ideas. That would be almost as bad as being bigoted.

Wake up, it's time for the old conference. I've made up my mind to at least listen to him, give him a chance.

"Why, hello there, Jim, what can I help you with this morning?"

"I'm John."

"Oh, yes, that's right. Sorry."

He's telling me that's right? I wasn't asking him what my name was. Grit your teeth, kid. Keep smiling.

"Well, I was wondering if my SAT scores came in yet."

"Yes, I have them right here somewhere. Just a second."

God, I think I got about 201 on that. I must have done pretty bad, the way he's frowning.

"Here you are, uh, John. You did fairly well—623 on verbal and 599 on math."

"Hey, that's a relief! I was afraid I wouldn't do so good." So was he, I'll bet.

"John, have you received any word from either of those schools you applied to?"

"Oh, yeah, I forgot to tell you. I was accepted at Ohio State with a pretty good chance for a scholarship, so I've decided to go there for sure." That was really a surprise. I thought I'd be stuck down at the extension.

"I'll go ahead and have your transcript and scores sent down there, then. That'll be better for you, I think, than Kent Extension as far as atmosphere goes."

Right.

"What do you think you'll major in?"

"Oh, I'm not too sure. Maybe political science."

"That sounds pretty good. Well, if there's anything else I can do, just stop in."

"Yeah, I'll do that. Thanks." He's a pretty good guy, I guess, if you say the right things. Hey, there's Pete.

"Hiya, Johnny! What're you in there for?"

"Oh, just getting a few things straightened out about college next year."

"Uhuh. Well, at least I don't have to worry about that kind of stuff any more. I'm all set up in that job in Akron."

"Oh, that apprentice thing? That sounds like it'll work out real well."

"Yeah, I'm leaving as soon as school's out. I'll be sharing an appartment with two other guys so I won't have to drive over and back every day. Hey, I've gotta run now. See you around."

Old Pete's got a better idea of where he's going than I do. Who knows—maybe I should have gone vocational, too. He said his boss told him he's got a good future ahead of him. He'll probably be earning more than I will at the end of the next four years. He'll be promoted regularly and if he gets dissatisfied there's a good chance that there'll be five or ten other openings. How many openings are there for political science majors?

It's frightening to think of myself working somewhere, being something. The whole thing seems so far away, yet it's coming towards me so fast. There are so many things I'd like to do too, like bumming around on tramp steamers or hiking across Europe. How can I be sure political science is really my bag? What am I going to do if I can't hack the work, or I just don't like it?

Hey, man, don't get so worried. It's what I really want to do, isn't it? Yes, it is, and if I change my mind, I can change majors without too much trouble, right? That's what they say. Anyway, there's no use getting uptight thinking about everything I won't be doing. What I will be doing and whether or not that's what is right for me is all that matters right now. Even though I won't ever feel totally confident and prepared, I'm ready for a change. Whether or not all of the seniors are ready, that change is coming.

The senior class has as many faces as there are graduates, and the senior who knows he is unique, a separate entity, finds his freedom and purpose. Although not every senior could be honored, the following pages present special portraits of 22 senior personalities, including the king and queen, George Spack and Elaine Dangel.

ELAINE DANGEL . . . The greatest thing in my high school is the wonderful student body. As a class officer, majorette, and Student Council officer, I have been proud to be their representative. Their warmth, friendship, and sincerity I'll always cherish. It was they who gave me the greatest honor of my life — Basketball Sweetheart.

GEORGE SPACK . . . My greatest experience in high school has to be competing in basketball. It's impossible to explain the thrilling sensation that comes over you when you run out onto the court before 2,000 screaming fans. Past tradition makes it an honor and a challenge to play for Salem, and it's an experience I'll never forget.

MARY JEAN MUNDY . . . Although all four years of high school have been fun, I think my senior year has been the most rewarding. The activities I participated in gave me a certain degree of self-satisfaction, although they all had their ups and downs. It will be sad to say good-bye to all the friends and fun I've had this year.

THE GRADUATES

From conformity to a life of personal decision

Teachers/Staff

The SUPERINTENDENT and BOARD OF EDUCATION have the herculean task of rendering the major decisions that affect the school system. Formulating long-range policies, the board meets the first Monday of every month and plans building expansion programs, selects all personnel, and protects the standard of education at Salem High School.

The PRINCIPAL of a high school is chief co-ordinator of all its activities. As an administrator, he is responsible for the quality of education, the maintenance of discipline, and the general atmosphere of the school. His is the task of planning curriculum changes, supervising teachers, and foreseeing the future needs of the school. As a disciplinarian he must maintain an image of order and respect within the school. He is also faced with those problems that go beyond the classroom. As principal he represents the school in the community and is often an easy target for sharp criticism.

The TEACHERS of Salem are a

varied and dissimilar group and yet they are united by their common goal. "At its highest level, the purpose of teaching is not to teach —it is to inspire the desire for learning. Once a student's mind is set on fire, it will find a way to provide its own fuel."

Salem Senior High's teachers disagree on many subjects—types of discipline, degree of student respect, methods of education. The list is endless. Many members of the staff feel that Salem has no problem with maintaining order among the students, while others believe there is definite deterioration of discipline. Disagreement prevails concerning the much-discussed dress code, but the view that is presently in the majority is that "things which are disruptive have no place in the classroom." As is necessary in operating a successful school system, however, members of the staff at SHS are in agreement over most aspects of their task.

Although several Salem teachers were not originally interested in education as a career, all were ultimately drawn into it "as if by a magnet." The entire staff originally had the idealism typical of beginning teachers and in nearly every case the ideals have remained. The common feeling on this subject is that a constant effort must be made in order to keep all of one's dreams no matter how often they continue to be unfilled or destroyed.

When asked about the atmosphere at SHS as opposed to other schools, the consensus could be summed up in the words of the teacher who said that "Salem High is too large to act like a small school and too small to act like a large school." Teachers who had taught in urban schools consider Salem students an extraordinarily warm and courteous group, while instructors changing to Salem from rural areas think of the people at Salem as being much more free and even disrespectful in attitude.

In speaking of the dispute concerning rules and codes at Salem High, the majority of the teachers were in accord. They were united on the stand that today's youth are "more aware of the tremendous technological and communicational pressures. However, people who are truly mature should be able to cope with pressures instead of silently ignoring or selfishly destroying." Several teachers commented that it is more difficult to maintain order and arouse student interest than it was ten years ago. On this theme one teacher said, "Often adults tend

Teachers everywhere and especially at Salem should concern themselves less with trivial details and more with their fundamental aim to arouse a thirst for knowing, most faculty members observed. One member of the staff made the statement that a satisfying day is one in which she has established communication with students, in which learning has occurred—not one taken up by paperwork. The comment was made that "the teacher who knows all the answers is not always the one who knows the right questions to ask; the teacher who makes students want to find out the answers for themselves is the only one who has genuinely contributed to the real end of education."

The GUIDANCE COUNSELORS act as the link between the administration and the individual student. Acting as mediators between students and teachers, the counselors investigate both sides of the conflict and come to a satisfactory agreement. The counselors direct new students and freshmen in their choice of programs and courses. For the college-bound seniors, the advisers are irreplaceable. They supervise the college board examinations, help in selecting a suitable college, and fill out innumerable transcripts necessary for admission. They must sift through a mountain of application paperwork to insure Salem students the best opportunity for college admittance.

The CHILD ACCOUNTING OFFICER must keep tabs on the attendance of all Salem High students. He can be seen at the beginning of each school day passing out attendance cards and accepting written excuses. Taking a personal interest in each student, he also assists in job placement of students and must sign work permits as a school official.

A good LIBARIAN is essential to an efficient library system. She is the planner and co-ordinator of the entire library format. Her main function is providing adequate reading and reference material for the student body. This task includes ordering the appropriate books, magazines, and newspapers and cataloguing and preparing them for the shelves.

The NURSE plays an important part in public health. Along with supervising and organizing the Heaf tuberculosis tests, she also keeps tabs on medical records of all the students. She is continually on call to administer first aid for minor accidents and illnesses incurred during the school day.

A smooth-running office depends on the work of the SECRETARIES. Paperwork is their major task. All school correspondence, newsletters for the teachers, endless official forms, and inevitable morning announcements are typed by the secretaries. They are in charge of the master file of schedule cards located in the main office and are responsible for the office aides who assist in office work.

A school cannot operate without the help of the CUSTODIANS and the KITCHEN STAFF. The janitors have the arduous task of upkeeping the entire school. They must continually see that the building is clean and healthful for the students and staff. In way of repairs they replace light fixtures, broken windows, and restroom facilities. During the winter they see that snow is shoveled from the entrances and heat is supplied to the school. Lawn maintenance is one of their summer duties. The cafeteria workers provide nourishing meals for the high school students. Every week they plan, prepare, and serve inexpensive lunches for hundreds of SHS'ers.

Yearbook

And finally, the end. A bittersweet end. Bitter. For with it comes the leaving of something so much a part of my life—a part of me and even more a part of all the people who contributed ideas and work. My thanks goes to Jan Denman, a really fine man; Frank Robinson, our photographer; Jim Parkinson, the yearbook company representative; and all of the little helpers who made this thing happen. Sweet. For with it comes the fantastic feeling of now being free to move on to other things. Perhaps my very own thing or, more hopefully, something involving other people. Something involving the universe. A beautiful thing. Peace.

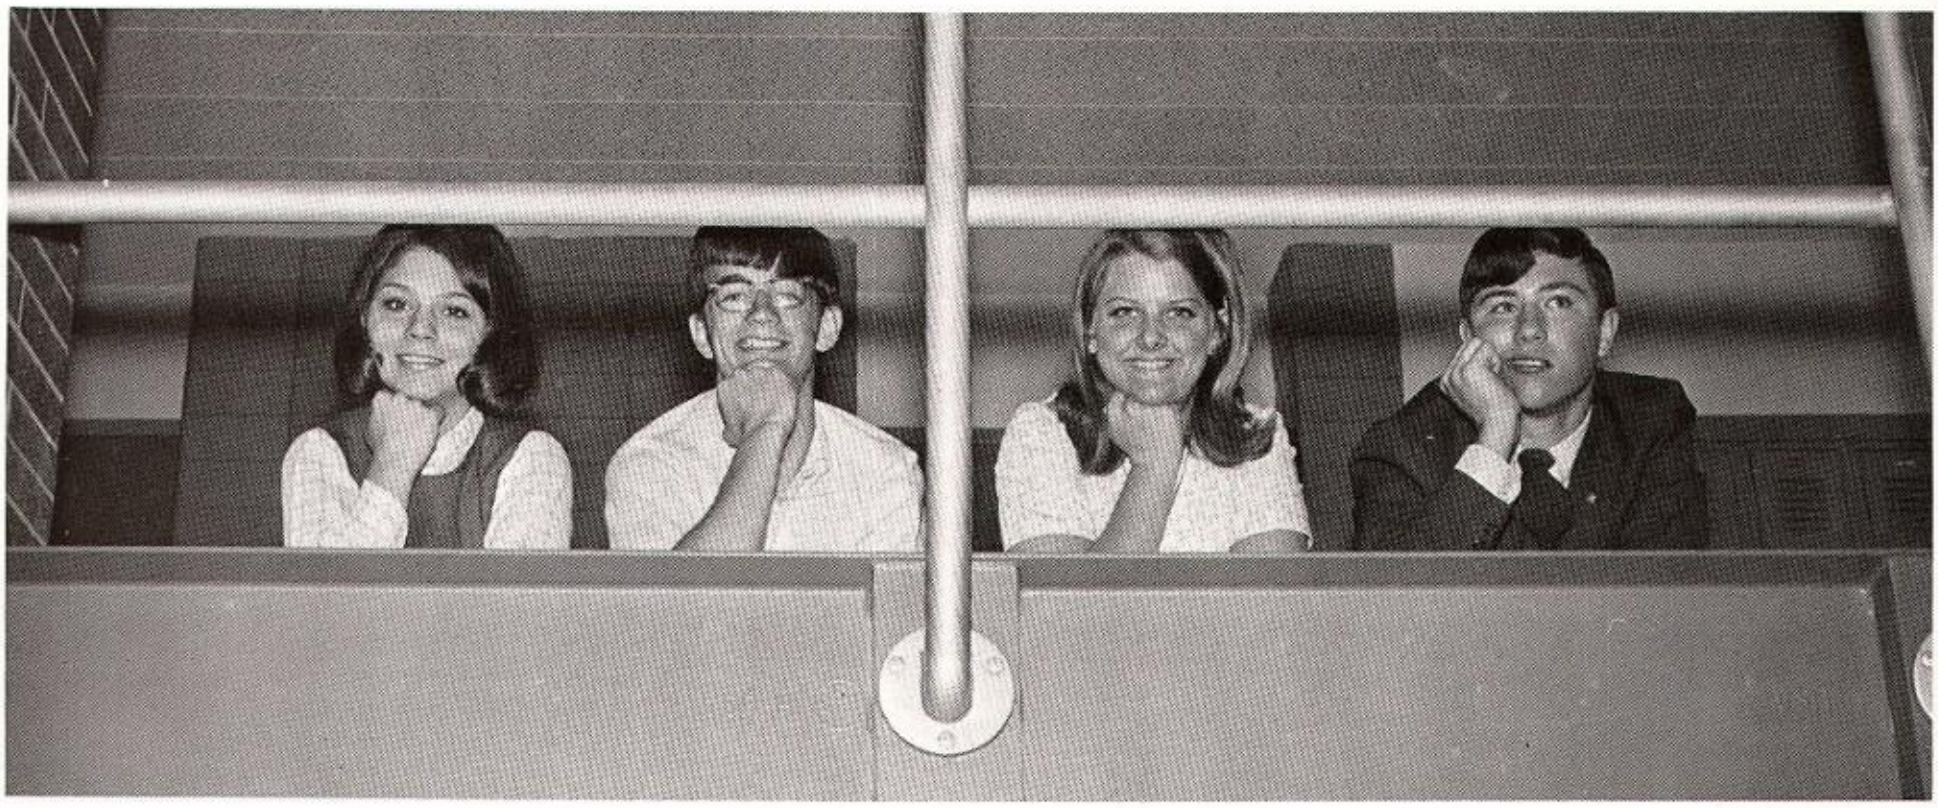
The senior class has as many faces as there are graduates, and the senior who knows he is unique, a separate entity, finds his freedom and purpose. Although not every senior could be honored, the following pages present special portraits of 22 senior personalities, including the king and queen, George Spack and Elaine Dangel.



STUDENT COUNCIL OFFICERS—Cathy Bricker, treasurer; Bob Herron, vice-president; Elaine Dangel, secretary; Bob Roberts, president.

ELAINE DANGEL . . . The greatest thing in my high school is the wonderful student body. As a class officer, majorette, and Student Council officer, I have been proud to be their representative. Their warmth, friendship, and sincerity I'll always cherish. It was they who gave me the greatest honor of my life — Basketball Sweetheart.

GEORGE SPACK . . . My greatest experience in high school has to be competing in basketball. It's impossible to explain the thrilling sensation that comes over you when you run out onto the court before 2,000 screaming fans. Past tradition makes it an honor and a challenge to play for Salem, and it's an experience I'll never forget.

MARY JEAN MUNDY . . . Although all four years of high school have been fun, I think my senior year has been the most rewarding. The activities I participated in gave me a certain degree of self-satisfaction, although they all had their ups and downs. It will be sad to say good-bye to all the friends and fun I've had this year.

THE GRADUATES

From conformity to a life of personal decision

Teachers/Staff

The SUPERINTENDENT and BOARD OF EDUCATION have the herculean task of rendering the major decisions that affect the school system. Formulating long-range policies, the board meets the first Monday of every month and plans building expansion programs, selects all personnel, and protects the standard of education at Salem High School.

The PRINCIPAL of a high school is chief co-ordinator of all its activities. As an administrator, he is responsible for the quality of education, the maintenance of discipline, and the general atmosphere of the school. His is the task of planning curriculum changes, supervising teachers, and foreseeing the future needs of the school. As a disciplinarian he must maintain an image of order and respect within the school. He is also faced with those problems that go beyond the classroom. As principal he represents the school in the community and is often an easy target for sharp criticism.

varied and dissimilar group and yet they are united by their common goal. "At its highest level, the purpose of teaching is not to teach —it is to inspire the desire for learning. Once a student's mind is set on fire, it will find a way to provide its own fuel."

Salem Senior High's teachers disagree on many subjects—types of discipline, degree of student respect, methods of education. The list is endless. Many members of the staff feel that Salem has no problem with maintaining order among the students, while others believe there is definite deterioration of discipline. Disagreement prevails concerning the much-discussed dress code, but the view that is presently in the majority is that "things which are disruptive have no place in the classroom." As is necessary in operating a successful school system, however, members of the staff at SHS are in agreement over most aspects of their task.

Although several Salem teachers were not originally interested in education as a career, all were ultimately drawn into it "as if by a magnet." The entire staff originally had the idealism typical of beginning teachers and in nearly every case the ideals have remained. The common feeling on this subject is that a constant effort must be made in order to keep all of one's dreams no matter how often they continue to be unfilled or destroyed.

When asked about the atmosphere at SHS as opposed to other schools, the consensus could be summed up in the words of the teacher who said that "Salem High is too large to act like a small school and too small to act like a large school." Teachers who had taught in urban schools consider Salem students an extraordinarily warm and courteous group, while instructors changing to Salem from rural areas think of the people at Salem as being much more free and even disrespectful in attitude.

In speaking of the dispute concerning rules and codes at Salem High, the majority of the teachers were in accord. They were united on the stand that today's youth are "more aware of the tremendous technological and communicational pressures. However, people who are truly mature should be able to cope with pressures instead of silently ignoring or selfishly destroying." Several teachers commented that it is more difficult to maintain order and arouse student interest than it was ten years ago. On this theme one teacher said, "Often adults tend

Teachers everywhere and especially at Salem should concern themselves less with trivial details and more with their fundamental aim to arouse a thirst for knowing, most faculty members observed. One member of the staff made the statement that a satisfying day is one in which she has established communication with students, in which learning has occurred—not one taken up by paperwork. The comment was made that "the teacher who knows all the answers is not always the one who knows the right questions to ask; the teacher who makes students want to find out the answers for themselves is the only one who has genuinely contributed to the real end of education."

The GUIDANCE COUNSELORS act as the link between the administration and the individual student. Acting as mediators between students and teachers, the counselors investigate both sides of the conflict and come to a satisfactory agreement. The counselors direct new students and freshmen in their choice of programs and courses. For the college-bound seniors, the advisers are irreplaceable. They supervise the college board examinations, help in selecting a suitable college, and fill out innumerable transcripts necessary for admission. They must sift through a mountain of application paperwork to insure Salem students the best opportunity for college admittance.

The CHILD ACCOUNTING OFFICER must keep tabs on the attendance of all Salem High students. He can be seen at the beginning of each school day passing out attendance cards and accepting written excuses. Taking a personal interest in each student, he also assists in job placement of students and must sign work permits as a school official.

A good LIBARIAN is essential to an efficient library system. She is the planner and co-ordinator of the entire library format. Her main function is providing adequate reading and reference material for the student body. This task includes ordering the appropriate books, magazines, and newspapers and cataloguing and preparing them for the shelves.

The NURSE plays an important part in public health. Along with supervising and organizing the Heaf tuberculosis tests, she also keeps tabs on medical records of all the students. She is continually on call to administer first aid for minor accidents and illnesses incurred during the school day.

A smooth-running office depends on the work of the SECRETARIES. Paperwork is their major task. All school correspondence, newsletters for the teachers, endless official forms, and inevitable morning announcements are typed by the secretaries. They are in charge of the master file of schedule cards located in the main office and are responsible for the office aides who assist in office work.

A school cannot operate without the help of the CUSTODIANS and the KITCHEN STAFF. The janitors have the arduous task of upkeeping the entire school. They must continually see that the building is clean and healthful for the students and staff. In way of repairs they replace light fixtures, broken windows, and restroom facilities. During the winter they see that snow is shoveled from the entrances and heat is supplied to the school. Lawn maintenance is one of their summer duties. The cafeteria workers provide nourishing meals for the high school students. Every week they plan, prepare, and serve inexpensive lunches for hundreds of SHS'ers.

"Hey! How'd you do on that history test? Man, that was a wipe-out!"

"Yeah, and what really ticked me off was how she made that long speech about never purposely misleading her students on an exam. I just barely missed flunking out on that."

"I almost saw the flag on that too. That algebra assignment didn't help matters an awful lot either. Did you ever notice how all the teachers pile on the work toward the end of the year—trying to make up for lost time, I guess."

"It's getting so I have a test every day in something or other."

"I know. I can't hack it either. I don't even study anymore."

"Nobody does. And what do the teachers care? They want out of here just as badly as we do."

"It's been so nice out, and we can't even have class outside. It's like being in a cell all day."

"Well, it hasn't been that bad all year."

"On the other hand, it's been getting pretty wild around here. Remember the flood, and those demonstrations . . . really burned me up the way they took matters into their own hands. I don't care how long somebody's hair is as long as he keeps it clean."

"Yeah, but you have to admit they had a point. I mean if one guy's got to cut his hair they all do. It's the same for the girls and those short skirts, which I'm not knocking. It's just that the rules have to be for everyone. That's what the dress code is all about, isn't it?"

"I suppose. But I'm sure it matters how a kid looks! As far as I'm concerned I can get more work done when I'm comfortable than when I'm all dressed up."

"Keep it down! The librarian will have a fit if she has to yell at us again."

"Yeah, but you really put him straight."

"Well, he bothers me. Ever since he tried to defend Sirhan and Ray I kind of wait for a chance to knock him down. Anyone with a mind that closed deserves to have his little ego smashed every so often."

"What kills me is he's no worse than lots of other kids. There's this girl in my Spanish class that truly thinks the Communists are on the brink of taking over. Remember that speaker we had last month? She actually believed all that bull he was feeding us."

"Well, a lot of what he said made sense to me. I mean, you can't go around burning down a lot of buildings and stirring up trouble if you haven't got something constructive to replace the establishment with."

"I guess so. It's just that some people refuse to admit there are big problems in this country. In this school, too."

"It's better than some schools we could be going to. A friend of mine moved to Youngstown and last time I saw him he said he was lucky he'd

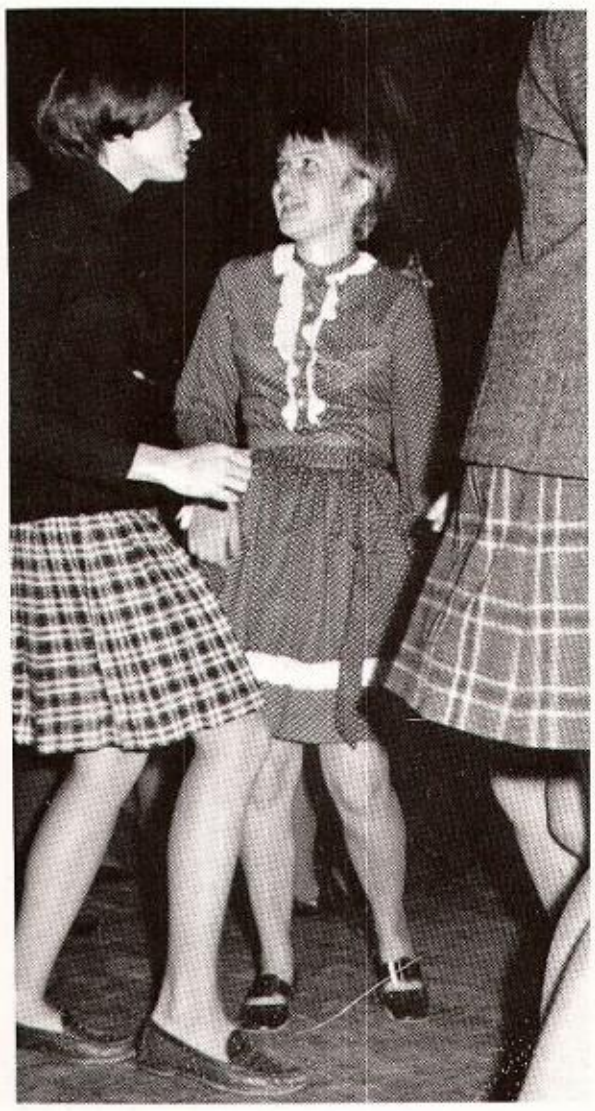
"Say, that reminds, me. What's for lunch?"

"It's stuffed peppers or Johnny Marzetti. Take your choice."

"You brought your lunch, didn't you? Pretty crafty."



"Well, I have an extra sandwich I'll let you have—for a price."

"Anything. That reminds me. How much is the after-prom going to cost me this year?"

"I don't know. Two-fifty or three, I think. I hope my date likes the Burger Chef an awful lot. Did you rent your tux yet?"

"No, I'm not sure where to get it yet. Are you going to help decorate?"

"Are you kiddin' me? I'm not that big on this school spirit thing. I was on practically all of the committees as it is."

"Have you decided what you'll sign up for next year?"

"No, but the counselors were in

my English class giving us the pitch. This one kid I know is in that vocational program. Sometimes I wish I had gotten into it. I don't know what I'll do. My parents are nagging about college, and those college boards! How'd you do on your SAT?"

"I don't know, and I'm sick of worrying about it. I think I'll run away and do what I want to for a change, and not have to worry about competing for grades and money."

"That's just about how I feel right now. Think of those seniors getting out in ten days!"

"I know, I know. Then I think about how much longer I have to go and I get sick all over again."

"I get what you mean. The pressure is eating me from the inside. I just want to get it all over and sleep all summer."

"That'd be great, except I have to work this summer. I still don't see how I'm going to be able to get up at six o'clock. You workin'?"

" 'Fraid so. My dad's been griping about money for college and adult responsibilities, so I had to get a job. It wasn't easy either. Lottsa kids didn't get one."

"The poor slobs will probably have to sleep all summer. Maybe I can give one of them my - -"

"Why, what do you mean, 'Be quiet, or we'll get our cards pulled?' We didn't say a word . . . yeah, but . . . I was just explaining this math to him and . . . I know we're not supposed to do homework in the library, but what are we supposed . . . 'read a book?' I can't read, so . . . yeah, well, there aren't any

And finally, the end. A bittersweet end. Bitter. For with it comes the leaving of something so much a part of my life—a part of me and even more a part of all the people who contributed ideas and work. My thanks goes to Jan Denman, a really fine man; Frank Robinson, our photographer; Jim Parkinson, the yearbook company representative; and all of the little helpers who made this thing happen. Sweet. For with it comes the fantastic feeling of now being free to move on to other things. Perhaps my very own thing or, more hopefully, something involving other people. Something involving the universe. A beautiful thing. Peace.

Achievements

Underclass officers were busy this year with a number of inevitable fund-raising projects. Freshman officers started their class treasury by running the concession stand at both football and basketball games. Pencil sales and window washes directed by the sophomore officers bolstered their account. They also selected three rings that were voted on by the class. Junior class officers found the prom on their minds even in September, and work progressed steadily until the middle of May when a night of "Southern Grandeur" came to Salem High.

Although the senior class had no fund-raising projects, the officers had a busy year. They investigated possibilities for a class gift, and although the officers and class wanted to give a student lounge, the idea was dropped because of a lack of space. The officers searched further for a suitable gift, and a portable PA system was the final choice. Sorting and distributing announcements was another task the senior officers completed. However, their most important roles came during commencement. Elaine Dangel opened the program with a welcome, and Mark Equizi read the role while Cathy Bricker assisted with the awarding of diplomas. Dana Barnes, class president, led the graduating seniors in the traditional changing of the tassels.

A Rotary student, Karin Lenhammar found many things in America similar to her native Sweden. One of the things Karin especially liked about the school was the grading system which she thought was fairer than the one back home. As a member of Art Guild, she participated in their projects and displayed art work at the annual May Show.

with the choir and Chicago with the math club. In the annual math fair, Evelyn won a trophy for her math project. She was a little surprised at the school's graduation procedure; in Malaysia graduation is a simple affair without caps and gowns.

Jorge Escala was Salem's second Rotary exchange student from Argentina. As a member of the football team, he introduced the soccer style kick for place kicking. Jorge was a member of Interact and helped the Spanish students as a member of Spanish Club. He returned home during Christmas time.

Four Boys' State delegates and two alternates represented Salem this summer in Athens, Ohio. They were chosen to attend the session after a series of interviews by American Legion officials. Two Girls' State delegates and their alternates were selected from a number of girls nominated by the faculty. Both groups spent a week in intensive study of the United States system of election and government. Boys' State delegates were Randy Colaizzi, Dean Hansell, Bob Herron, and Bob Roberts. The alternates were Rick Hannon and Randy Hanzlick. Attending Girls' State were Pam Bruderly and Mary Beth Beall. Girls' alternates were Sandy Jackson and Sue Taugher.

Tension mounted, the crowd stilled, and a name was announced to the multitude. The occasion was the annual recognition assembly, and the student body provided the stars. Fifteen awards, amounting to more than $800, were giving to outstanding students. Cindy Fisher and Bill Eckfeld copped the Danforth Award for the two seniors deemed best "all around student." Honorable mention for National Merit placement went to Dan Walker, Scott Clark, and Lorie Roth. Students found their special talents recognized with equally special awards. Speech Club oration trophies were given to Mercy Smith, Margie Eckstein, Nancy Cleckner, and Rosemary Stephanic, and the Salco stenography award was won by Linda Belich, Lynn Scott, Becky Bricker, and Beth Steele. Individual honors, the Betty Crocker, Bausch and Lomb, and Martha McCready math awards, were won by Holly Smith, Scott Clark, and Dan Brown, respectively. A trades and industry award went to Mark Sabatino. Elaine Dangel and Debbie Green won the Arion award for musicianship. Twelve students from all four classes won money in the Brooks creative writing award: seniors Lorie Roth, Scott Clark, and Cindy Fisher; juniors Mary Lee Purrington, Randy Colaizzi, and Pam Bruderly; sophomores Jan Deane, Cyndy Kleinman and Jan Elevick; and freshmen Bruce Zellers, Debbie Ray, and Kathy Shasteen. This year's Marie Burns music awards were claimed by Debbie Green, John Krauss, Ron Krauss, Nancy Cleckner, Mercy Smith, Sue Schehl, Ron Roberts, and Beth McLaughlin. Scholastic Art awards were presented to Debbie Zellers, Janet Hutcheson, Marianne Galchick, Kathy Cowie, Elaine Melitshka,

and Gail Kovach.

Awarded gold cords symbolizing scholastic achievement, ten gifted seniors were recognized for their outstanding grade point averages. The competition was extremely close with only .008 of a point separating the top two students. The standings for the top ten: Scott Clark (3.94), Cindy Fisher (3.93), Peg Stone (3.92), Lorie Roth (3.81), Buff Fisher (3.80), Cathy Krumlauf (3.79), Mary Ann Helman (3.75), Debbie Ping (3.75), Wally Ward (3.73), and Janet Galchick (3.69). Besides being honored at the recognition assembly, the top ten were feted at a luncheon by the Kiwanis and presented with dictionaries.

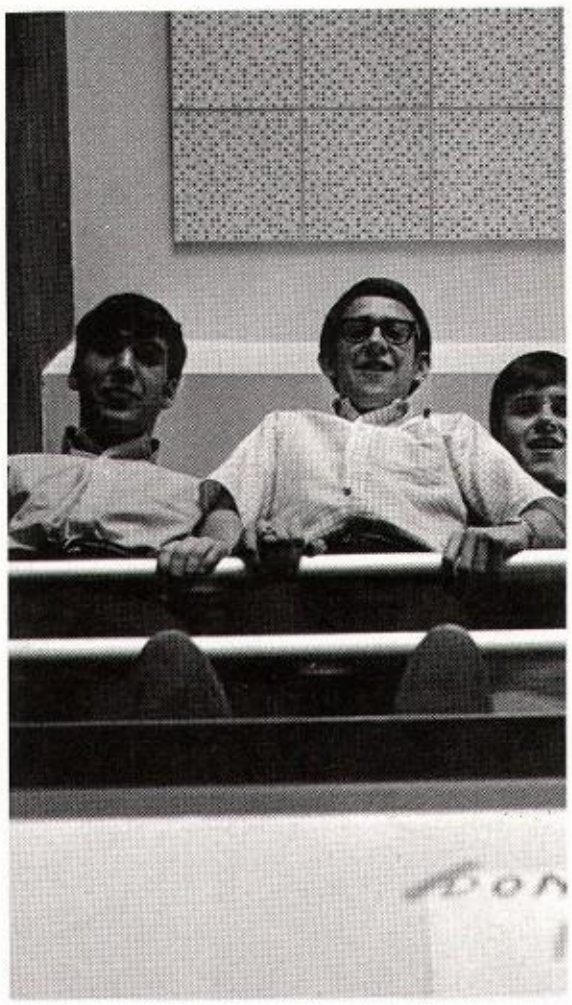
Seniors

Well, here I am, waiting once again to see if these guidance counselors have anything to say worth listening to. I'm not sure anyone can help me at this point. What a dismal thing to think! Still, like my parents have been saying, what I do after June rests on my own decision.

I get scared just thinking about surviving alone at college. It seems as though no matter what kinds of college preparatory classes I've taken and student handbooks I get, I'll be lost. Worse yet, I imagine all the other freshmen will be right at home within a week. I know it won't be that bad, but I can't help worrying about it. Well, one consolation is that I have a few months left as a senior. I can't really say what's so great about senior year. It's partly the powerful feeling of watching freshmen flee in terror at my approach, the wickedness of skipping out when I feel like it, and the security of still being in a situation where most responsibilities can be given to someone else. At the same time, senior year can be pretty much of a drag. People put such pressure on me for grades and then turn around and offer totally boring courses that are supposed to prepare me for my "college experience." It's an endless cycle: the pressure creates tension among students and then when they try to take their minds off the responsibilities they're accused of being reckless and indifferent, which in turn creates more tension. By next year, I'll at least be away from my parents' pressure and nagging. For once I'll be able to look at issues without my parents trying to influence my opinions. That's probably the best thing about being away from home. I'll have a chance to solidify my own beliefs. I mean, I love my family and all that, but I have my own habits and ideas that they won't accept



and I won't change.

College life is so much freer, and the atmosphere is so open I won't be pressured about my ideas. Dad's always lecturing about not becoming a hippie or a radical, but you don't have to be fanatic to be open on controversial issues. I can't shut out good ideas just because popular opinion gives the group a bad name. I only hope I don't get so carried away with openness that I just have wishy washy ideas. That would be almost as bad as being bigoted.

Wake up, it's time for the old conference. I've made up my mind to at least listen to him, give him a chance.

"Why, hello there, Jim, what

can I help you with this morning?"

"I'm John."

"Oh, yes, that's right. Sorry."

He's telling me that's right? I wasn't asking him what my name was. Grit your teeth, kid. Keep smiling.

"Well, I was wondering if my SAT scores came in yet."

"Yes, I have them right here somewhere. Just a second."

God, I think I got about 201 on that. I must have done pretty bad, the way he's frowning.

"Here you are, uh, John. You did fairly well—623 on verbal and 599 on math."

"Hey, that's a relief! I was afraid I wouldn't do so good." So was he, I'll bet.

"John, have you received any word from either of those schools you applied to?"

"Oh, yeah, I forgot to tell you. I was accepted at Ohio State with a pretty good chance for a scholarship, so I've decided to go there for sure." That was really a surprise. I thought I'd be stuck down at the extension.

"I'll go ahead and have your transcript and scores sent down there, then. That'll be better for you, I think, than Kent Extension as far as atmosphere goes."

Right.

"What do you think you'll major in?"

"Oh, I'm not too sure. Maybe political science."

"That sounds pretty good. Well, if there's anything else I can do, just stop in."

"Yeah, I'll do that. Thanks." He's a pretty good guy, I guess, if you say the right things. Hey, there's Pete.

"Hiya, Johnny! What're you in there for?"

"Oh, just getting a few things straightened out about college next year."

"Uhuh. Well, at least I don't have to worry about that kind of stuff any more. I'm all set up in that job in Akron."

"Oh, that apprentice thing? That sounds like it'll work out real well."

"Yeah, I'm leaving as soon as school's out. I'll be sharing an appartment with two other guys so I won't have to drive over and back every day. Hey, I've gotta run now. See you around."

Old Pete's got a better idea of where he's going than I do. Who knows—maybe I should have gone vocational, too. He said his boss told him he's got a good future ahead of him. He'll probably be earning more than I will at the end of the next four years. He'll be promoted regularly and if he gets dissatisfied there's a good chance that there'll be five or ten other openings. How many openings are there for political science majors?

It's frightening to think of myself working somewhere, being something. The whole thing seems so far away, yet it's coming towards me so fast. There are so many things I'd like to do too, like bumming around on tramp steamers or hiking across Europe. How can I be sure political science is really my bag? What am I going to do if I can't hack the work, or I just don't like it?

Hey, man, don't get so worried. It's what I really want to do, isn't it? Yes, it is, and if I change my mind, I can change majors without too much trouble, right? That's what they say. Anyway, there's no use getting uptight thinking about everything I won't be doing. What I will be doing and whether or not that's what is right for me is all that matters right now. Even though I won't ever feel totally confident and prepared, I'm ready for a change. Whether or not all of the seniors are ready, that change is coming.

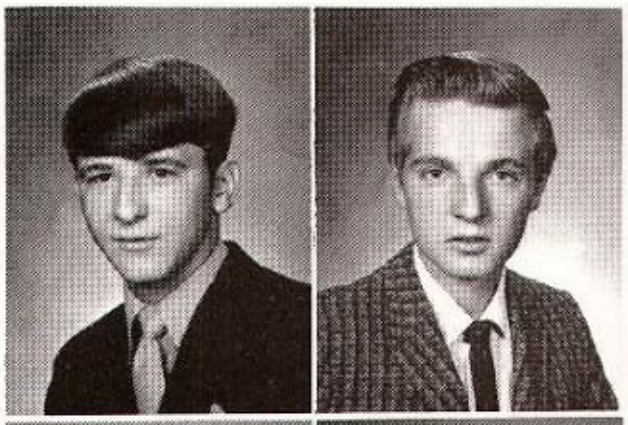
The senior class has as many faces as there are graduates, and the senior who knows he is unique, a separate entity, finds his freedom and purpose. Although not every senior could be honored, the following pages present special portraits of 22 senior personalities, including the king and queen, George Spack and Elaine Dangel.

ELAINE DANGEL . . . The greatest thing in my high school is the wonderful student body. As a class officer, majorette, and Student Council officer, I have been proud to be their representative. Their warmth, friendship, and sincerity I'll always cherish. It was they who gave me the greatest honor of my life — Basketball Sweetheart.



Nile Beltempo

GEORGE SPACK . . . My greatest experience in high school has to be competing in basketball. It's impossible to explain the thrilling sensation that comes over you when you run out onto the court before 2,000 screaming fans. Past tradition makes it an honor and a challenge to play for Salem, and it's an experience I'll never forget.

MARY JEAN MUNDY . . . Although all four years of high school have been fun, I think my senior year has been the most rewarding. The activities I participated in gave me a certain degree of self-satisfaction, although they all had their ups and downs. It will be sad to say good-bye to all the friends and fun I've had this year.

THE GRADUATES

From conformity to a life of personal decision

Teachers/Staff

The SUPERINTENDENT and BOARD OF EDUCATION have the herculean task of rendering the major decisions that affect the school system. Formulating long-range policies, the board meets the first Monday of every month and plans building expansion programs, selects all personnel, and protects the standard of education at Salem High School.

The PRINCIPAL of a high school is chief co-ordinator of all its activities. As an administrator, he is responsible for the quality of education, the maintenance of discipline, and the general atmosphere of the school. His is the task of planning curriculum changes, supervising teachers, and foreseeing the future needs of the school. As a disciplinarian he must maintain an image of order and respect within the school. He is also faced with those problems that go beyond the classroom. As principal he represents the school in the community and is often an easy target for sharp criticism.

varied and dissimilar group and yet they are united by their common goal. "At its highest level, the purpose of teaching is not to teach —it is to inspire the desire for learning. Once a student's mind is set on fire, it will find a way to provide its own fuel."

Salem Senior High's teachers disagree on many subjects—types of discipline, degree of student respect, methods of education. The list is endless. Many members of the staff feel that Salem has no problem with maintaining order among the students, while others believe there is definite deterioration of discipline. Disagreement prevails concerning the much-discussed dress code, but the view that is presently in the majority is that "things which are disruptive have no place in the classroom." As is necessary in operating a successful school system, however, members of the staff at SHS are in agreement over most aspects of their task.

Although several Salem teachers were not originally interested in education as a career, all were ultimately drawn into it "as if by a magnet." The entire staff originally had the idealism typical of beginning teachers and in nearly every case the ideals have remained. The common feeling on this subject is that a constant effort must be made in order to keep all of one's dreams no matter how often they continue to be unfilled or destroyed.

When asked about the atmosphere at SHS as opposed to other schools, the consensus could be summed up in the words of the teacher who said that "Salem High is too large to act like a small school and too small to act like a large school." Teachers who had taught in urban schools consider Salem students an extraordinarily warm and courteous group, while instructors changing to Salem from rural areas think of the people at Salem as being much more free and even disrespectful in attitude.

In speaking of the dispute concerning rules and codes at Salem High, the majority of the teachers were in accord. They were united on the stand that today's youth are "more aware of the tremendous technological and communicational pressures. However, people who are truly mature should be able to cope with pressures instead of silently ignoring or selfishly destroying." Several teachers commented that it is more difficult to maintain order and arouse student interest than it was ten years ago. On this theme one teacher said, "Often adults tend

Teachers everywhere and especially at Salem should concern themselves less with trivial details and more with their fundamental aim to arouse a thirst for knowing, most faculty members observed. One member of the staff made the statement that a satisfying day is one in which she has established communication with students, in which learning has occurred—not one taken up by paperwork. The comment was made that "the teacher who knows all the answers is not always the one who knows the right questions to ask; the teacher who makes students want to find out the answers for themselves is the only one who has genuinely contributed to the real end of education."

The GUIDANCE COUNSELORS act as the link between the administration and the individual student. Acting as mediators between students and teachers, the counselors investigate both sides of the conflict and come to a satisfactory agreement. The counselors direct new students and freshmen in their choice of programs and courses. For the college-bound seniors, the advisers are irreplaceable. They supervise the college board examinations, help in selecting a suitable college, and fill out innumerable transcripts necessary for admission. They must sift through a mountain of application paperwork to insure Salem students the best opportunity for college admittance.

The CHILD ACCOUNTING OFFICER must keep tabs on the attendance of all Salem High students. He can be seen at the beginning of each school day passing out attendance cards and accepting written excuses. Taking a personal interest in each student, he also assists in job placement of students and must sign work permits as a school official.

A good LIBARIAN is essential to an efficient library system. She is the planner and co-ordinator of the entire library format. Her main function is providing adequate reading and reference material for the student body. This task includes ordering the appropriate books, magazines, and newspapers and cataloguing and preparing them for the shelves.

The NURSE plays an important part in public health. Along with supervising and organizing the Heaf tuberculosis tests, she also keeps tabs on medical records of all the students. She is continually on call to administer first aid for minor accidents and illnesses incurred during the school day.

A smooth-running office depends on the work of the SECRETARIES. Paperwork is their major task. All school correspondence, newsletters for the teachers, endless official forms, and inevitable morning announcements are typed by the secretaries. They are in charge of the master file of schedule cards located in the main office and are responsible for the office aides who assist in office work.

A school cannot operate without the help of the CUSTODIANS and the KITCHEN STAFF. The janitors have the arduous task of upkeeping the entire school. They must continually see that the building is clean and healthful for the students and staff. In way of repairs they replace light fixtures, broken windows, and restroom facilities. During the winter they see that snow is shoveled from the entrances and heat is supplied to the school. Lawn maintenance is one of their summer duties. The cafeteria workers provide nourishing meals for the high school students. Every week they plan, prepare, and serve inexpensive lunches for hundreds of SHS'ers.

HOME SAVINGS AND LOAN

For four decades the Home Savings and Loan Company of Youngstown has operated a branch office in Salem. The present building is a mixture of colonial architecture and modern conveniences. Distinctive features of the red brick building such as the cupola, main entrance, and electric clock, are lighted at night. Home Savings is a safe place to save, where accounts are insured to $15,000, and your money is available when needed. Loans to buy or build homes on long terms at low rates are a specialty.

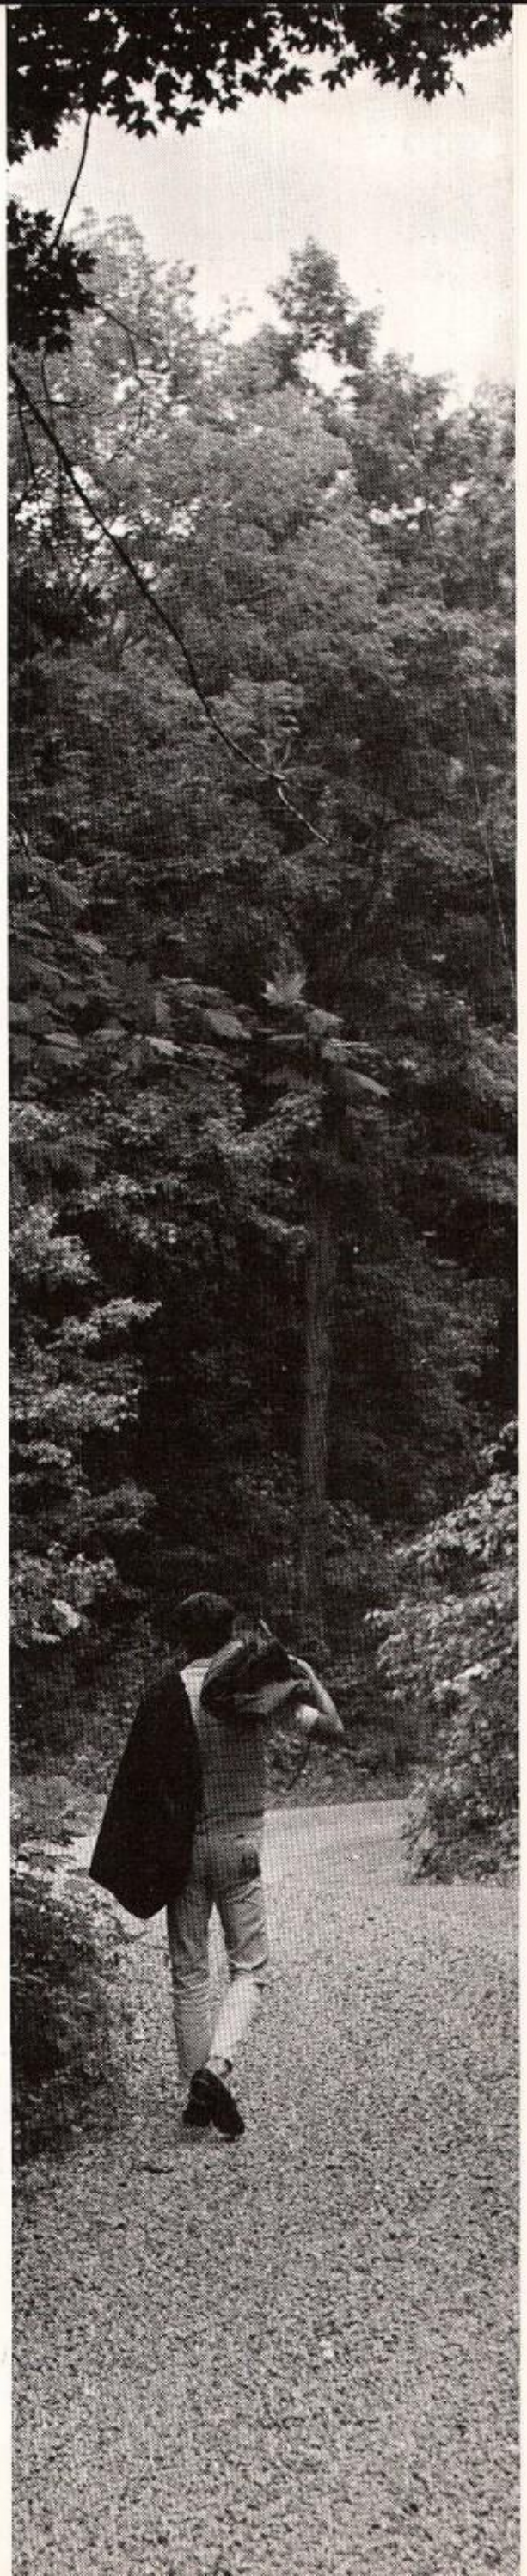
this is the end
beautiful friend
this is the end
my only friend, the end
—The Doors

Yearbook



And finally, the end. A bittersweet end. Bitter. For with it comes the leaving of something so much a part of my life—a part of me and even more a part of all the people who contributed ideas and work. My thanks goes to Jan Denman, a really fine man; Frank Robinson, our photographer; Jim Parkinson, the yearbook company representative; and all of the little helpers who made this thing happen.
Sweet. For with it comes the fantastic feeling of now being free to move on to other things. Perhaps my very own thing or, more hopefully, something involving other people. Something involving the universe.
A beautiful thing.
Peace.

Buff

Tony,

You're one in a million,
and the greatest person
I know. Good luck in school, and all the happiness you deserve.
Never forget the good times
we've had and look forward to the one's ahead!
It's always too late, but never too soon.

Love,
Carol
